"There is a strong tendency for our minds to become imprisoned by what our hands do for a living.

This fifth reunion meeting of the University of Washington Orthodontic Alumni is dedicated in honor of Dr. Benjamin C. Moffett for his contributions to Dentistry and for his constant stimulation and encouragement of his students and colleagues.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Welcome to the fifth meeting of the University of Washington Orthodontic Alumni. This year marks 30 years of orthodontic education and research progress within the orthodontic department. As of June of this year, there have been 290 students who have graduated and moved into our society to utilize the gifts they developed while in school to help make better lives for their patients.

Each of us has been very fortunate to have been under the leadership and educational guidance of Al Moore, Dick Riedel and Don Joondeph as well as many others who have contributed much time and talent to the school. The foundations these men have provided have enabled each of us to achieve standards of quality that are enriching to our patients and to our society. This year we are singling out Ben Moffett to honor for his achievements in the dental field. Ben has been very productive in his educational endeavors and it is through his enthusiasm and willingness to share this knowledge and his insights that each of us have been helped in starting on a new level of awareness in understanding our patients and their problems.

We can be proud of the achievements of our alumni as we see them participating in programs throughout the world. We see them as officers within our dental societies; we see them as teachers, instructors, and educators within our universities and colleges; and we see them as clinicians and speakers in programs being presented across the country — each striving toward the quest for excellence and giving new form and shape to the profession of orthodontics. They are all concerned about quality in patient care and it is in this spirit of excellence that we are proud of our alumni and their accomplishments.

The achievements of our alumni are a reflection of the high standards that have been set for us by all those associated with the orthodontic department. It is their dedication to education that has enabled each of us to narrow the distance between where we are and where we want to be.

Sincerely,
Les Erickson
President
